The Sournal folks, at Providence, harvest got over the discomfort caused by that here rem of eight pounds of sand in a base of race cotton. But they must not be so particular. That sand is a mure feafrauday thin lings, outrages and robberies inobability practiced upon the Free North by the minions of the Slave Power. Just think of the Kansas villers; the Repeal of Slave ast of 1850; the treatment of Maunchusetti by Bouth Carolina, (case of Judge Hoarif and the annual payment of Two Million of Dollars, by the North, for postage! Sanded cotton is a small position by the side of these things.

The Philadelphia Press gives the following particulars of his last moments: The shedow which the death of Rev. Dudley A. Tyng has thrown over this community seems to have deepened from the hour of its first announcement.

The closing scenes of his life, as describes by subjet his brethren in the ministry at the Jayne's Hall meeting, was a must thrilling narrative, and seemed to move every heart present. Indeed, as the minister who was an eye-witness to the scene-proceeded with his simple statement of the last weeds addressed by the dying man to those wound him, all eyes were suffused

From the time of the fatal accident to one hour, previous to his death, Mr. Tyng had in unfaltering confidence in his recov ery, and even conversed freely and hopefuly upon what, as he believed, Providence tion to which he was being subjected. He believed it was intended to promote his greater efficiency as a minister of the Gostpel, and he looked forward with bright hopes o when he should be able to pressh, and to presch as he had never done before. 12

About one hour be ore his dissolution, his family, searing that his hopes of requiriry were groundless, approached him with the solemn intimation that in all probability he he was seen to leave them. His physician entering the chamber at the instant, Mr. Tyng speks to him of these fears. The doctor's reply was, that they were only too true-that his time was fast drawing to a close. The dying man, with the same he role spirit which never formook him through all bis sufferings, received the solemn anseat with the utmost resignation answering only, "Then, it is well-it is very well: God's will be done."

And a few moment's of composure, he called his friends present and the members of his family to his bed-side, to bid them last farewell. He thanked his physician who is not a professing Christian for his kind attention, warning him with great tendeman to lose no time in giving himself to that Saviour who was now sustaining him in the hour of trial. To each of his children he gave an affectionate farewell, hoping that by the grace of God, and the care of a deyoted mother, they might be early brought to know their Saviour."

To his wife, who has attended to him with so much affection and fidelity, all through his illness, he included in his part ing words the request that she would use her endeavors to bring their boys up to the ministry. He was now to say inrewell to his venerable father, the Rev. Stephen H. v. D. D. Trat aged parent by the hand, he said with much carnestness, "Stand up for Jesus! father ; stand up for Jose ! and tell my brethren in the ministry wherever you meet them, to stand up for Jedus 1"

At the close of this solemn ceremony feeling that he was approaching his end, he requested those around him to sing a hymn. After a moment of silence, his own wife notwithstanding the solemn dimensional under which this request was mude, co.u menced singing the beautiful hypen -oraddoubly so by its appropriateness to thatecancion - beginning.

"Bock ot ages' cleft for me. Let me hide myself in Thea."

The hymn was sung, and, even while the echoss of that mornful strain floated in the sir, the spirit of Dudley A. Tyng took its flight to other, and, as we have reason to believe, more blissful realms.

At the meeting in Jayne's Hall, on Tues day, a very singular fact was referred to in consection with Mr. Tyng's recent sermon in that hall, to an immense audience, from the text of scripture, "Ye that are men, go and serve the Lord."

THE FINEMEN OF LONDON-The ages of the London firemen range from twenty to sixty and upwards, and there is one man in the service in his seventieth year quite able to take his turn on duty with the rest. "The men are carefully selected, and full three-fourths of them have been men-of war's men. The duties these, men have to perform are by no means light, for each man, on the average, has been on duty at the station house, or on the watch on premises damaged by fire, three days and three nights of the twelve hours each in every week of the past year. This is ex-clusive of a sort of enginedrill for the younger men twice a week, and attendance to clean engines and tools, and repair and, oil the hose; and of attendance and working at fires, when the men are in the midst of in-Tres, when the men are in the hildst of in-tense, heat, steam, and smoke, satirated; with water, and obliged to stand in cleva-ted situations, exposed to sewere and cutting; winds, so that, they are often seen in winter-literally encruated with ice. The men are sometimes called out by fires, or alarms of jars are put barefully away, to be opened fire as many as four times in the night, when wanted.

Notwithstanding this hard duty and extreme.

A Kentucky Democrat gives a shared Apprehensive of mortality among the fermen is highly favorable. For the first 13 years of the establishment, the deaths were at the size of 96 per 10,000 per about the mortality has fallen to 70 per 10,000. Both these calculations include deaths by accident, which in spite of the perious nature of the employment, are very rare, and have not exceeded 44 in 10,000 in the whole period, of 25 years. The higher mortality of the cartier period is attributed, and probably with justice, to the less careful selection; but the moderate rate throughout the whole period of 25 years is evidently to be attributed to the unusual care and attention hestowed on the comforts and health of the men, who live either at the stations, or in houses provided by the establishment and are subject to careful inspection. The management is in the hands of a committee appointed by the several fire assurance offices, who pay the men liberally, and figive them plenty of warm and comfortable clothing.

The St. Louis Democrat thus describes the appearance of the coffins which contained the remains of the aged Benton and his grand-child:

" By its side was the little coffin, contain "By its side was the little coffin, containing the body of the statesman's grandchild, McDowell Jones. Each body was inclosed in an air-tight zine case, which was laid within a managany coffin. A lid was taised, lao as to allow friends to look through a glass on the faces of the dead. The face of the "Great Missourian" were that expression of majestic placifity which was habitual to him in life. The lips were slightly open, the eyes, closed, and every lineament, in the face in a state of repose, that judication as a state of repose, the particular based as a state of repose, and the particular based as a state of repose as a state of re end of the reteran's stormy life. There was no discoloration or wrinkle to be seen, and the presence of death was visible only in the closed eyelids, and the cold, white, in the closed eyends, and the cold, white, marble like appearance of the features—

The grandchild lay as sweetly as though; only sleeping, with its little head correct with golden hair, nestling amid white hyacinths and early spring flowers, whose purity was typical of its own young spirit."
